Increases confidence and self-esteem – which has a knock-on effect in all areas of your life and learning.

Improves health and wellbeing – reducing stress, increasing a sense of wellbeing and happiness.

Provides important life and social skills – such as listening, concentration, working as a team.

Develops creativity and self-expression – helping you to think differently and develop the power of your imagination.

Improves cognition, literacy and numeracy – Recent neuroscience research has shown that young people who take part in creative activities have higher levels of cognitive capacity, specifically in their language acquisition and numerical problem-solving skills.

Can be the key to unlocking potential – particularly for young people who are strongly creative, or who struggle to engage with other areas of learning.
